

A consequence is the result, effect, or outcome of an action, choice, or event. It can be positive or negative, and it normally happens because of something that came before it.

Types of Consequences

- Natural: Happen on their own without anyone stepping in, like feeling cold if you do not wear a coat.
- Logical: Planned results that closely match the action, like cleaning up a mess you made.
- Positive: Good rewards or praise that happen when you do something helpful or right.

Why They Matter

- Cause and Effect: They show us that every choice leads to a specific end.
- Learning: They help people learn how to make better choices next time.
